

A Diary Entry

Today was an emotional roller coaster ride. I can still hear the screams from the roller coaster ringing in my ears at Sunny Amusement Park.

This morning, I was reading a really interesting book about wild animals for my school project at home. I was particularly interested in endangered animals, so I asked Dad if we could go to Happy Zoo together. And Dad said yes! I jumped up and down, punched my fist high up in the air and screamed “Yah!” I was really excited.

Dad took me to the bus that goes to Happy Zoo. We took some photos to send to Mum and chatted on the bus.

When we arrived at Happy Zoo, we saw a sign that said “Closed on Mondays”. I was devastated. Tears rolled down my eyes. I sobbed, “Why? Why? Why is it closed?” I wished it were just a dream, but then when I looked up again, the sign was still there. Suddenly, I felt a twinge of anger. I could feel the anger bubbling inside me, like a volcano ready to erupt. Soon, Dad said, “Calm down. I have Plan B”. I calmed down. We took a bus to Sunny Amusement Park.

When we went in, there was a sea of people. Suddenly, my stomach began growling. I realised that I was really hungry! So, Dad bought me a hotdog and a chocolate-flavoured ice-cream. They tasted delicious. I loved the chocolate ice-cream, especially because there were some marshmallows mixed inside. After I finished eating, we went on the Poly Poly roller coaster. It was really exciting because it flipped us up and down! Then we went on the Water Explorers. It is a super thrilling ride on a small raft that is like a roller coaster, where the water rushes down really fast. I thought it was so much fun that I rode it five times. After each ride, I kept grinning from ear to ear!

After we played Water Explorers, we rode the biggest and fastest roller coaster in Sunny Amusement Park! It was really fun! Someone who sat behind me even puked on the ride! It was really disgusting.

Soon, it was time to go home. We rode on the bus. As soon as I got home, I told Mum about everything. After this experience, I learnt that being flexible has many benefits.
