

A Trouble in the Park

Written by Abby Chung (6L 9)

Have you ever heard of Superboy? That's who I turned into when I saved Mrs. Chan last week.

Last Wednesday, I went to the park with Jason, my best friend. We went there for a walk after school as we had just eaten. Since the weather was so hot, we both wore T-shirts and shorts. I was shorter and skinnier than Jason, perhaps because I was younger than him.

Suddenly, we heard a cry for help. "Help! Somebody help me!" Jason exclaimed, "That sounds like my neighbor Mrs. Chan! Let's see what is going on." We immediately rushed towards where we heard the odd sounds, and saw Mrs. Chan getting threatened by a robber with a knife. Mrs. Chan had curly, short hair. She was slightly chubby and was in her thirties. She wore expensive jewellery and a gold necklace. The robber had a tattoo on his right arm. He also was in his thirties and was wearing a mask that covered his nose and mouth. When the robber was threatening Mrs. Chan, every muscle in her body locked up, turning her limbs into leaden weights. She screamed at the top of her lungs, unable to move because she was too afraid.

I immediately turned into Superboy, forgetting that Jason was standing right next to me. I became strongly-built and taller than before. Jason was very surprised and left his mouth hanging open. I didn't have any time to waste, I had to go to save Mrs. Chan!

I rushed to the crime scene and crossed my arms. "Hands up, robber! You are going to jail," I said. The robber tried to get away, but I ran in front of him in a flash. He then tried to attack me but I knocked him out first. I immediately called the police and they brought him to jail.

Mrs. Chan thanked me over and over. Jason promised not to tell anyone that I was Superboy and said he would become my sidekick.

Now, we all live in peace without any more incidents or robberies, so you may never see Superboy again.
